Education:

Doctor of Philosophy in Political Science (1984) from Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois, with an emphasis on public administration theory, policy analysis, and American government.

Master of Arts in Public Administration (1981) from Northern Illinois University,¹ DeKalb, Illinois, with an emphasis on local government, budgeting and finance, and program evaluation.

Bachelor of Arts in Psychology (1978) from Southern Illinois University, with an emphasis on social psychology and research methods.

Dissertation:

"A Study of Professionalism and Democratic Responsibility Among Local Government Department Heads: A Survey and Empirical Analysis." Committee Chairman: James M. Banovetz.

Interests:

Public Management, Public Budgeting and Finance, State and Local Governance, Policy Analysis and Evaluation, and E-government

¹ http://www.mpa.niu.edu/pub_ad/mpa_program/index.shtml. I worked for a local agency in Rockford Illinois tasked with evaluating CETA summer programs for youth for 18 months after finishing my undergraduate degree and then finished an MPA in that same amount of time.

Courses Taught:

I teach a range of classes at the graduate and undergraduate levels. Common graduate courses include Budgeting and Finance,² Local Government Management, and Public Management Systems. Also at the graduate level, I taught courses in applied research methods for many years. I have taught the Research Seminar in Public Policy at the Doctoral level. My undergraduate classes include Governmental Budgeting, Local Governance, and Critical Policy Issues.

Academic Experience:

Director of the Public Performance and Management Center in the Andrew Young School of Policy Studies (May 2011/Present). I created this center when I was department chair and collaborated with the Director Deon Locklin in the intervening years. I took over when Deon retired last spring. Major projects include assessing customer and employee satisfaction in State of Georgia departments. My leadership role involves expanding the prominence of this center through collaboration, outreach, proposal writing, and social media.

Department Chair of the Department of Public Management and Policy in the Andrew Young School of Policy Studies (July 2005/July 2008). As chair, I had a leadership role in the following department accomplishments:

- Creation of an undergraduate public policy major.³
- Restructuring an MPA degree, a masters in urban studies (to create an MPP), and a doctorate in public policy.
- Completion of an "A" graded NASPAA self-study report.⁴
- Development of a stronger student support structure, including: the design and implementation of a student career week, a spring speaker series, an open house, yearly student surveys, and a student organization.
- Creation of a public management research center.⁵
- Development of several international shared-program relationships and a three week summer program in Europe.⁶
- Development of an alumni outreach program, including: creation of an alumni club, an improved alumni data base, and the collection of alumni profiles.

- Collaborating with a new MPA Program Development Director to develop a marketing plan for the MPA degree.
- Developed a number of plans and projects to boost enrollment, increase student learning and intensify the classroom focus on creative thinking.
- Implementation of a program assessment system that built upon the “Weave” system that was available at GSU at the time. I also developed surveys for current and former students that were used to prove additional performance data. Refining the MPA mission was essential to the application of these assessment tools.
- Development of a department newsletter, the Informer.

University Service:

I have served on a wide variety of academic committees. At the university level, I have been elected to the university senate on multiple occasions, and I have served on the evaluation committees for upper-level administrators. Technology is an interest of mine, and I have served on many college and university-level technology committees, but ad-hoc and standing. I have been elected to both college and departmental executive committees, and I served on the admissions committee of the Georgia State MPA program for a decade. I also served on the Executive Committee of the College of Public and Urban Affairs for a number of years.
