

The Andrew Young School of Policy Studies houses several prominent academic departments and research centers. We are a leading regional and national think tank. Our students get hands-on experience in policy research as they earn degrees that prepare them for public service or the private sector. Our mission and methods are fundamentally academic – but our research and outreach programs affect policy-making in the world we live in.

Our job is conducting serious scholarship that serves our community; not only urban and metro Atlanta, but Georgia, the Southeast, the United States and countries around the world.

ANDREW YOUNG SCHOOL

The Andrew Young School of Policy Studies at Georgia State University is distinguished, vibrant center of scholarship, where research and teaching have real-world applications. Our innovative faculty and bright students are immersed in issues such as health care policy, tax reform, entrepreneurship, international development, nonprofit management, water policy and more.

The Andrew Young School's new home is in the heart of downtown Atlanta. The state-of-the-art facility is a nucleus of policy study with a tangible impact on the future of our students, faculty and community. We invite you to play a leadership role in the life of the school by naming a physical space in the building or establishing and contributing to endowments for esteemed academic programs and chaired professorships. Charitable giving is what enables colleges and university programs to achieve preeminence.

Your support of The Andrew Young School of Policy Studies will help build the foundation for generating and sharing knowledge, ultimately generating solutions to both global and local issues. Your generous gift is an investment in The Andrew Young School's continued success.
